Language is a major barrier for refugee women to integrate into their new community.

Finding employment, undertaking tertiary education, and communication with local services can be difficult or even impossible without English language skills.

Through our range of free English Conversation Programs, women learn practical English skills to use in everyday life - empowering them and giving them the capacity take control of their life.

These programs are available for refugees who have been in Australia up to five years.

Please note that we do not provide childcare as part of the program. These English Conversation Programs are provided through our SETS program (Settlement, Engagement and Transition Support).
